

the no call list was an answer to many prayers, please, let us try to keep looking ahead instead of having to look over our shoulder at the way things were before the no call list. if people are interested in getting those annoying phone calls let them take their names off the list. why should the rest of us have to put up with the annoyance of those calls? and for heavens sake, why on earth would anyone allow telemarketers to get a list of subscribers with cell phones? is there any justice in this country or are the businesses in this country holding on by such a thin thread that they have to resort to selling their clients information in lieu of using open and honest means of doing business. just give me a break...please. if i had quit doing business with a company in the previous 18 months, maybe there was a reason for my doing so.
